

This network of times which approached one another, forked, broke off, or were unaware of one another for centuries, embraces all possibilities of times.

The Garden of Forking Paths
Jorge Luis Borges

It is false that in the present order the media are “purely and simply means of distribution.” Once again, that is to treat them as the relay of an ideology that would find its determinations elsewhere...

Requiem for the Media
Jean Baudrillard

When your model of my model of your model of me is almost a replica of your model of me, we can say that you know me; in terms of a human relationship, that we have reached a level of confidence and trust.

Soft Architecture Machine
N. Negroponte

each individual can be his own architect real future political intentions must be artistic. this means that they must originate from human creativity, from the individual freedom of man.

Bureau for Direct Democracy
J. Beuys

The most general aim must be to broaden the non-mediocre portion of life, to reduce its empty moments as much as possible
